Social Justice Book List

AUGUST 2017

Edited by Katherine Bassett,
Brett Bigham, and Laurie Calvert

Contributors: Revathi Balakrishnan, Katherine Bassett, Brett Bigham, Nate Bowling, Chad Miller, Shanna Peebles, John Tierney, Monica Washington, Abdul Wright and more than 60 State and National Teachers of the Year and Finalists

Acknowledgments

Our Partners

Our partner in this work, the University of Phoenix. The incredible faculty and administration at the University of Phoenix believe strongly in the importance of education equity in preparing our nation's children to take their place as contributing citizens. They fight tirelessly for this through their teacher preparation programs, professional learning offerings, and special projects such as the one in which NNSTOY is engaged with the University and the National Action Network.

Our Editors

Ms. Laurie Calvert, Co-Editor, who spent countless hours in assembling this list from suggestions by our members.

Mr. Brett Bigham, who served as Co-Editor, and turned his talents to firming up the format of the entries and made sure that they were attributed correctly to authors, illustrators, and NNSTOY member nominations.

Our Section Authors

We are most grateful to those NNSTOY members who took on the task of writing, in a few short sentences, the introductions to the various genres of books included in this list. Their time and talents are greatly appreciated.

Our Contributors

With most sincere thanks, we recognize the 60 plus contributors to this booklist, each of whom took seriously the task of nominating books that they use to teach social justice skills and concepts to students. Without them, there would be no booklist.

Introduction

Katherine Bassett

It is most exciting to introduce the first in a series of booklists drawn from recommendations by State and National Teachers of the Year and Finalists for State Teacher of the Year.

We are living in interesting times, with issues of fairness, equity, equality and social justice often conflated as our nation faces new and ongoing challenges concerning the rights of all of the people who live here. At NNSTOY, our mission is to provide every student whose life we touch with a high-quality education and to advocate for the rights of every child to such an education. We take this charge most seriously.

School is a place where many issues facing our nation rise to the forefront. As teachers, how do we best prepare our students to face and discuss social justice concerns? For many of us, books offer a solid place to start.

As a child of two civil rights leaders, I was raised with a strong consciousness of issues of social justice. I was also raised in an environment surrounded by books and eventually became a school librarian. The running joke in my house was that, if you couldn't find me, I would be in a closet or behind a sofa with my head buried in a book. Books opened my eyes to new worlds—and to problems and solutions to them.

I attended the World's Fair in New York City with my family as a child and at the New York Public Library I randomly selected Eleanor Estes' The Hundred Dresses. I refused to leave the exhibit until my parents promised that they would help me find this book in my own public library so that I could finish it. The Hundred Dresses opened my eyes to the world of prejudice and discrimination meted out by children. Through it, I learned a vocabulary I would later use in teaching Holocaust education, words like victim, survivor, perpetrator and bystander.

As teachers, we use books to start conversations, spark ideas, present challenges and brainstorm solutions. We provide this booklist as a resource for educators, parents, community members and policy makers interested in reaching young people on issues of social justice. It is divided into five sections: early learning (pre-K – 3rd grade), elementary reading and chapter books (grades 4-6), young adult literature (grades 7-9), secondary/adult literature, and texts to help teachers create equitable learning environments.

We trust that you will find it useful and appreciate your utilization of this resource.

With warm regards,

Katherine Bassett
President and Chief Executive Officer
National Network of State Teachers of the Year

Introduction

Angie Williams, Ed.D.

I applaud the National Network of State Teachers of the Year for taking the initiative to compile the list of books that relate to different perspectives of children living and going to school in the U.S.

It is important to share stories that are inclusive and broad that reflect the diversity of our students, country, and our own multiethnic societal fabric.

At University of Phoenix, we share the same goals of helping bring together different ideas and promoting respect among those who share different viewpoints. The University has a more than 40-year history of making higher education more accessible for working adults from all walks of life. As an educator, I also support efforts to promote inclusiveness and a sense of connectedness.

It is important we help our children understand the diversity and what it means to belong, no matter one's background. It is also essential to provide stories that relate to their own experience as a young Americans.

We must learn from the experiences of those in the past who faced discrimination, prejudice and other unjust treatment provide a powerful testimony to students today, in order not to repeat the tragedies and build a more just and inclusive world.

As a society, we thrive when we understand, accept, and celebrate our differences. Therefore it's my hope that children grow up to understand there are diverse viewpoints and backgrounds while also not diminishing their own unique identities.

I hope this list inspires children to be who they are unapologetically all while promoting kindness, activism, justice, and rights for all.

All My Best,

Early Learning

“The picture books of childhood are one of our most early shared cultural experiences. We are brought together with Green Eggs, Magic Pebbles, Giving Trees and Mike Mulligan’s Steam Shovels. When these picture books have cultural lessons our entire society shares the experience. We all know Ferdinand who would not fight and the Sneetches who judged so harshly. How many of us have sat and pondered that fence in The Other Side and wondered when it was finally torn down? The lessons learned in those early picture books last a lifetime and make us who we are as a nation.”

TESTIMONIAL

“Literature’s best work as social justice is to provide the “shock of recognition” that Melville describes when you see your experience reflected back to you in another’s words. Literature lets us know that others survive, especially those who are like us. These books are narratives of hope to help us process our lives.”

SHANNA PEEPLES

TESTIMONIAL

“Books, perhaps more than any other form of media, have the power to transform minds and perspectives. We’ll never make real progress as a society unless we’re able to broaden our horizons—that’s the real power of books.”

NATHAN BOWLING

2016 Washington Teacher of the Year

High School

Grades 10 – 12

“Literature such as Black Boy or The Color Purple opens the door to so many meaningful discussions with students. The titles in this section are not just rich in historical detail about this country, but they also serve as a tool to help students see the importance of empathy for the plight of others. Equally as important, literature allows students to see their own stories and concerns validated through amazing fiction and prose.”

“ There is no doubt power resides in texts; however, my work with Philosophy for Children has shown me texts are most meaningful when they are utilized as a catalyst for students to raise philosophical questions that initiate collaborative inquiries concerning life’s most important issues. The value of these titles resides in their abilities to stimulate this much-needed dialogue in our classrooms in an effort to create a more thoughtful, compassionate, and just society.
